Theater students at Estrella Mountain Community College will stage a play with themes relevant to their generation when they present a drama about a troubled teenager.

From Up Here will run at 3 and 7 p.m. Friday, 7 p.m. Saturday and 2 p.m. Sunday at the Performing Arts Center on the Avondale campus, 3000 N. Dysart Road.

Director George Lopericio said the play is a departure from the comedies that are usually staged at the school.

From Up Here centers on Kenny, a high school senior who is dealing with issues of Written by Liz Flahive, the play premiered in 2008 at the Manhattan Theatre Club and was nominated for Drama Desk and Outer Critic Circle awards for best play.

Lopercio said he selected the play with a cast of 10 based on the interests of students in his theater production class.

He liked the play because many of its characters are similar in age to the student actors, he said.

“There’s something nice about engaging with characters who are dealing with the same things you are,” Lopercio said.

Alex Montalvo, 22, of Goodyear, who plays Kenny, describes his character as a reserved, quiet kid who’s forced out into the world.

“The play is about the life of a teenager in high school,” Montalvo said.

He said he can relate to some of the play’s themes since he’s a member of a blended family himself and was bullied in high school when he was overweight.

Since the play is set in the present, Lopercio said there’s an immediacy to it.

“These issues are still happening,” he said.

The play’s 10 scenes are set at the school and in the kitchen of Kenny’s home, where tensions are high as his mother settles into a new marriage.

Montalvo noted the play demonstrates that Kenny’s actions have implications for his family and friends.

“The most important point to me is that your actions don’t just affect yourself, they affect everyone around you,” he said.

Students started work on the production in January, with the requirement to work on the play for 50 hours during the semester, which involved meeting two or three times a week.

Aiyana Gaither Battle, 18, of Avondale, who plays Kenny's friend Kate, said her first experience preparing to go on stage was a lesson in working hard to "dive deep into this person you are becoming."

Ten other students are members of the play's crew, handling costumes, make-up, props and sets.

Antonio Hernandez, 20, of Avondale, said he designed the set around the framework of a "theatrical kitchen" that breaks apart for other scenes.
